

Virtual Artist Alley

Virtual Balticon's Artist Alley gives artists the opportunity to connect with their fans even during shelter-in-place. Our virtual Artist Alley tables are listed alphabetically, and include a short bio and link to the artist's web site or online shop. This page will be updated as artists sign up so keep coming back!

Many artists are available to chat with on the BSFS Inc Discord server under B54 Artist Alley chat and voice channels. (See the Discord usage page for details on accessing the Discord server.)

Balticon 54 is also hosting an Art Show exhibit on the Second Life platform. (See the Second Life usage page for details on accessing Second Life.)

Hats and Spats

At Hats and Spats, we combine our love of creating with our love for Steampunk. We bring our different skills together to create beautiful, whimsical, and wearable tokens from our favorite niche of UN-history. Vintage hats given a second life with a Steampunk flair. Handmade mini fascinator hats. Fanciful spats in a variety of fabrics and designs. Add in a little fantasy with hand-sculpted polymer clay tentacle and dragon jewelry and art. From head to toe, we've got you covered.

Jo Hogan

Jo is on a mission to make everything she can out of thread. She has embroidered the Island of Catan, a 3D T.A.R.D.I.S, and is currently (slowly) working on a model of Winterfell from embroidered lace. In her Etsy shop you can find lace bats, owls, and foxes; steampunk bunnies; colorful fairies and mermaids; along with other ornaments and jewelry. Sometimes she works with fabric and vinyl as well, which results in monster bags, dragon purses, and the occasional penguin. You can view her gallery here.

born with a pencil in one hand and some clay in the other. It's pretty much true. I lucked out since my parents supported my art habit. In fact early on my mother and I baked one of my first clay pieces in the old oven. Of course it was crayola clay and it just melted and stunk up the house! Whoops! Live and learn.

I've progressed since those days and still strive to improve. My life experiences have shaped my art in particular a 3 year stay in Germany and Europe. There my love of art (in particular the human form, gargoyles, grotesques and mythology) was really intensified. I've been pursuing my vision and passion to create now for more than 20 years.

JP Jackson Art

I'm an artist from Baltimore Maryland; I specialize in animation and illustration. I studied Animation at the Maryland Institute College of Art and have pursued a career as a freelance animator and comic illustrator. My work focuses on re-imagining classic super heroes and depicting African gods in the context of space. Overall my work reflects a science fiction and fantasy world, where black people and people of color are at the forefront.

Patricia McCracken

Patricia McCracken is an accomplished fantasy artist working in watercolor. Her style is influenced by the Japanese wood block prints from the Edo period called, Ukiyo-e, which translates to "pictures of the floating world." Keeping her paintings light and delicate, but with the bold colors and patterns typical of the latter end of that period.

David Lee Pancake

David Lee Pancake's sculptures grace homes and business all over the world. He pursues a wide variety of subject matter that includes dragons, superheroes, abstracts, fantasy, and horror sculptures. He states: "I love detail and texture and gryphons, dragons and other mythical creatures allow me the freedom to play with paint and clay to bring to life what's imagined." David is an entrepreneur, avid reader, science fiction and fantasy aficionado, arm chair philosopher and science geek, but his first love is art. We are sure you won't forget his name, just think about your favorite breakfast food.

Sarah Sexton

Sarah Sexton works in polymer clay and has recently turned her attention from jewelry to mixed media originals and prints. Her mixed media pieces use watercolor backgrounds and sculpted polymer clay to create three dimensional images that hang on a wall. Her favorite subjects are fantasy, flora, and fauna.

She has been working in polymer clay for almost ten years now, since taking time off from college. She has been attending Balticon as an artist and volunteer since Balticon 46 in 2011.

People often say that artist Lisa Snellings' work defies classification. It utilizes a wide variety of materials and techniques, mixing two and three dimensions, kinetics, and writings. Over the years, stories based on her work have been written by the likes of Larry Niven, Neil Gaiman, Peter S. Beagle, and Gene Wolfe. Some of those works employed her two-inch-tall Poppets, which, on their own, are now collected all over the world.

Currently, Lisa is building a world around her art that includes stories, a board game, a Tarot deck and her creative processes and life as an artist.
